This document is devoted to Dr. Kennedy raping my work history as if it was simply an exercise in Narcissistic PD. I pick up that thread here after Kennedy mischaracterizes my 3-year relationship with Linda Bell as "short-lived."

At about that time, Mr. Saunders was working for the University of Arkansas in Little Rock as a programmer. He stated that people there were not rational and "there was too much politics." He also stated that his manager and director were "clueless."

I got this job at UALR working as a maintenance programmer writing COBOL code to support our Payroll system on our Honeywell 6000-series mainframe computer soon after graduating UT Austin with a 3.6 GPA in May 1977. THE story I related is how "I was staggered as Director for Software Development Bob Black offered a tour of the machine room, with its howling Diebold air conditioning unit chilling the air for the massive Honeywell mainframe, along with an impressive card reader, several tape drives, and ranks of 20MB disk drives the size of washing machines... My thought was 'Surely THIS is the most rational line of work ever conceived!' But as it turns out, there was a lot of politics involved." ... TRULY this is invariably the case in software development!

SUMMARY: "Work History of bonze blayk" p 2/2

From 1979-1985, Mr. Saunders did odd jobs such as bookkeeping, pizza delivery, and working at restaurants. "Working at restaurants"? Not ever! In 1982, I founded databeast as a dba oriented towards doing word processing for doctoral dissertations. In 1985, Mr. Saunders was hired by Cornell Information Technologies as a computer programmer. David Lambert and Dick Cogger were his supervisors while at Cornell. They stated that they felt uncomfortable with Kevin and he had made references to war in his writings. Kevin was noted to be unusual even for the profession of computer programmers. He thought of himself as very bright and creative, but really operated about the 60th percentile of others in the department. Mr. Saunders was excitable and could get very upset about pet-issues such as management. He could get along with coworkers, but would harangue people over and over about his pet-issues. When he first came to Cornell in 1985, he was very much counterculture and shy, and had a slight stutter. He gained confidence and talked more as time went on. He had trouble in work because of his inability to present professionally, remain organized, and keep schedules. When his supervisors tried to interact with Kevin, even in normal interactions, they felt that 20% of the time there was difficulty in figuring out what his comments had to do with reality, as he felt they were many conspiracies involving management and him. He was noted not to take personal responsibility for issues. He was placed on administrative leave ~~twice, once in 1990 and once in 1992~~, after conflicts with management. He was sent to EAP for engaging in antagonistic situations and getting very angry. During the ~~second~~ episode, Mr. Saunders was described as behaving with absolute irrationality and responding with vague, disconnected responses, conspiratorial in tone. Mr. Saunders felt that only he could recognize what the problems were and that management was too stupid to see things. It should be noted that management at Cornell was so concerned about Mr. Saunders' behaviors, they had his security clearance revoked and they changed the locks on the doors of the computer programming offices. Management eventually counselled Mr. Saunders to find employment elsewhere and ceded the rights of his work product to him for $250 and in 1993, the patient left his job at Cornell and started working for Millennium Computer in Rochester. In February 1994 for a salary of $55,000/yr (CPI adjusted $97,609.78/yr ca. 2021) on "Secure Single Sign-On" software for the Mac using DES developed with IBM for the State of Michigan. His relationship with his supervisor at Millennium was poor and he quit his job at Millennium and worked for Cornell on a contract basis after that. I left in August 1994, rejecting their offer for contract work on COMET billed at $45/hr.

- Is it surprising I should make references to war in my writings given that I have had an interest since the age of 12 in studies in Military History? (cf. "military history" typo in my 1997 RRFU "Core History" "Use of Leisure Time.")
- Is "operating in the 60th percentile" of a group of "high achievers" (July 7 1991 salary increase letter) a bad thing?
- "Harangue people over and over again about his pet-issues" ??? I WOULD HAVE BEEN FIRED! New York is a "Hire at will/Fire at will" state! "Trouble in work"? I authored COMET, the Cornell Macintosh Terminal Emulator!
- I spent 8 1/2 years at Cornell in the same department promoting "conspiracy theories"? - This is news to me! (+ ditto).
- I was placed on paid leave for inappropriate emails, and restored to full honor under another boss with the same salary and less taxing work in Network Support AFTER being wrongfully accused of releasing the horrific 'MBDF-A' virus!
- Cornell "ceded the rights of his work product to him for $250"? THIS IS HALLUCINATORY - I told Dr. Kennedy I obtained a license to develop a product based on my COMET code in 1995 for $0 down and 7.5% on gross sales! I worked on dataComet as DATABEAST INC from 1994 through 2012! - Rosie-Anne Quvus aka bonze blayk!
