Hospitalist Note:

I was asked to evaluate this patient who was admitted after an altercation with police and others at a local restaurant earlier today. The patient's injuries include a recently-found shoulder dislocation. Orthopedics was asked to address that problem, and they are prepared to do so now, but patient is refusing.

In speaking with the patient, she is both agitated, disoriented and incoherent. There was no ability to have a meaningful conversation and the patient clearly lacks capacity to make medical decisions for herself at the present time. She neither understands the nature of her shoulder injury nor the risks it portends if left unaddressed. As the risks of treatment are small compared with the risks of not reducing the shoulder, I will serve as the second physician to endorse proceeding with reduction. This is clearly in the patient's best interest given the current situation.

I have discussed this with the ICU nurse staff as well as Dr. Deidre Blake.

Please call with any other questions.
